

Another Try for Higher Supports Seen

By EDWIN B. HARRINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Mundt (R-SD) said today advocates of higher government farm price supports may make one more effort to raise them in the pending omnibus farm bill.

"There has been some discussion of adding a gadget that would freeze part of our surpluses in a national security reserve and thus permit higher supports," Mundt said in an interview.

Sen. Humphrey (D-Minn.) has such an amendment pending, but opponents of high-level supports have said they would fight its adoption.

Leaders expected to resume action on the catch-all farm bill sometime late today. It has been pending since Feb. 22.

Pushed ahead of it for consideration today were 194 routine measures piled up on the legislative calendar.

As the farm bill moved slowly toward passage, Sen. Cotton (R-NH) contended that "some Democrats are trying to delay and sabotage this bill."

He added, in a weekend interview, that they "want to fizzle up the farm program because it is the only peg they can hang their hats on" in the coming elections.

But Sen. Ellender (D-La.) replied that "much of the delay is the direct responsibility of the Republicans" who, he said, demanded a Senate recess for Lincoln Day political speeches and have since talked at length on the bill in Senate debate.

Humphrey's pending "national security reserve" amendment would direct that some surplus farm products be set aside in a strategic stockpile to be used only in time of disaster, war or similar emergency.

In fixing the level of government supports, the secretary of agriculture is directed to consider the existing supply, along with estimated demand, anticipated production and other factors. Under Humphrey's proposal, he could ignore surpluses and so increase the level of supports.

Blue-eyed people have more trouble with glaring sun and artificial light than people with darker eyes.

HARNESSING THE ELEPHANT—Unusual sight in Lucknow, India, is this elephant harnessed as a farm animal. The pachyderm-powered plow was being demonstrated to sugar cane growers and technicians. The elephant certainly has no trouble dragging the plow, and the plowman, sitting atop the Indian-style tractor, leads an easy life.

MUSIC TO RECOVER BY—The newscamera catches a poignant scene in Children's Hospital, Akron, Ohio, during the semi-annual Children's Concert Day. Five-year-old Letta Sublett, almost immobilized from burns, rings out a soft rhythm on the bells to Mrs. L. E. Warford's piano. Under leadership of Children's Concert Society volunteers, youngsters in the hospital "roll their own" music in rhythm band fun. Those who can move go from ward to ward.

bank, but this did not release Mississippi River Fuel of an ultimate potential liability for payment in event of a default by Stephens or Union. If that should happen, the bank is authorized by Mississippi River Fuel to call upon it for payment.

The Ark-La stock that Cities Service sold in 1954 technically belongs to Stephens, Union and King, but it is pledged for the bank loan and they can do nothing with it that Mississippi River Fuel does not approve.

Their contract limits cash annual dividends to 50 cents per share ($5 par value), unless Mississippi River Fuel approves a larger return. Thus, after a record-breaking earning of $1.07 per share in 1955, the customary cash dividend could not be increased, but permission was given for a 10 per cent stock dividend.

Stephens originally agreed in 1954 to spin off Ark-La's gas wells, extraction plants and related gathering lines to a subsidiary corporation that was never formed because the plan proved not feasible. The agreement also provided that Stephens' control of the subsidiary would be transferred to Mississippi River Fuel, thereby leaving Stephens with control of Ark-La which would then have been purely a distributor.

That arrangement was canceled but under the new contracts Stephens, Union and King are pledged to prevent Ark-La from disposing of any assets whatever, except those sold in the ordinary course of business, and they also have promised not to permit any recapitalization of Ark-La, except with Mississippi River Fuel's consent.

On the strength of two healthy rate increases granted Ark-La by the Arkansas Public Service Commission after Stephens became the nominal owner of the majority stock, the Ark-La quotations on the American Stock Exchange have risen from $11.25 per ($5 par value) share to approximately $20.

The $11.25 price prevailed on the Exchange when Stephens made the deal with Cities Service in the fall of 1954. Cities Service received $12.50 per share.

When Stephens consummated the sale of 40 per cent of its Ark-La holdings to Union Securities and King, the price stated in the contract was $12.00 per share, but in addition the buyers paid Mississippi River Fuel $1,000,000. This lifted the per share cost to $13.73.

But the Stephens contract with Union and King called for the sale of 882,070 shares, all to Union except 75,000 to King, whereas, prior to delivery, Ark-La Gas declared a 10 per cent stock dividend last December. Thus Union and King received 970,277 shares for a total consideration of $12,115,100.55, or $12.50 per delivered share. (A recent dispatch erroneously reported a figure of about $15 per share at a time when the American Exchange quotations were around $19.)

Computed at Stock Exchange prices, the stock which Stephens sold Union Securities and King was worth — on paper — about $7,000,000 (a previous estimate of $5,500,000 to $5,000,000 was ultra-conservative) more than they contracted to pay. But Stephens was not at liberty to offer all or any part of the stock on the Exchange. The original agreement with Mississippi River Fuel, while it called for eventual sale of the stock by Stephens, prohibited the marketing of the shares through the Exchange.

Thus only a minority of the stock can benefit directly from stock market gains by Ark-La, while the Stephens contracts stand, for they guarantee that at least 2,158,111 shares cannot be offered for public trading. Not restricted by the Stephens contracts are 2,025,599 shares. Their owners have been free to buy and sell on the American Stock Exchange during the 17 months that have brought the market price up from $11.25 to around $20 per share, even though there is no immediate prospect of a greater cash dividend than 50 cents per share annually.

At $20 per share, that's only 2 1/2 per cent; but at par value, it's 10 per cent.

Accidents in State Cost Lives of 11

By The Associated Press

Industrial accidents claimed two lives in Arkansas during the week which ended Sunday midnight, but fire and traffic accidents remained at the top of the list of killers.

Five persons died on the state's highways during the 7-day period; fire took the lives of three.

The tabulation shows a total of eleven dead from violent causes.

Clyde Calkins, 51-year-old Camden millwright, died yesterday of injuries suffered Friday at the International Paper Co. plant where he worked. Calkins was caught between a steel beam and moving machinery.

At Fort Smith Saturday, a construction worker was killed when a section of brick wall fell on him during a wrecking job.

Rufus Thomas, 60-year-old Parkin Negro, was injured fatally yesterday as he walked across Highway 70, 1 1/2 miles east of the St. Francis-Crittenden county line. He was struck by a car, and died a short time later.

Paul Condra, 37, president of an automobile supply company at Springdale, was found dead at his home yesterday. A bullet from a .22 caliber rifle had been fired into his head.

A head on collision of two cars yesterday near Oil Trough in northeast Arkansas killed J. A. Leonard, 69, of Judsonia.

Three other fatal highway accidents occurred earlier in the week — one near Fort Smith, one near Danville, and near Siloan Springs where an automobile broke through a police road block and smashed into an embankment, killing a Crawford County man.

A fire near Scott, in central Arkansas, took the lives of three Negro children Thursday.

Gatun Lake in the Panama Canal is the largest man-made lake in the world, says the Twentieth Century Fund.

The 18-member choir is touring the United States for six months, playing concerts in Boston and going west as far as Oklahoma. From left are Elizabeth David, 23, of Delhi; Mrs. Elizabeth Sherring, 22, of Mathura, and Virginia Theodore, 25, of Delhi. Miss David and Miss Theodore are playing instruments called "sitaras," and Mrs. Sherring plays the "dhruba."

39 Cars Jump Rail Near Turrell, Ark.

TURRELL (AP)—Thirty-nine cars in the middle of a long freight train suddenly leaped the track, plunged down an embankment and caught fire in a strange and spectacular wreck near this small northeast Arkansas town yesterday.

There were no injuries. Workmen still were clearing wreckage from the scene today — more than 24 hours after the mishap.

At least 18 boxcars were destroyed or considered almost a total loss and 13 others were damaged. Frisco Railway men gave no estimate of the damage, but they described it as "tremendous."

A total of 41 cars left the track, but two of them did not leave the railroad bed. The embankment was 20 feet high in places. Tankers filled with oil were among the cars that rolled down totaling around $33,000 in connection with a 3-way automobile collision near Fayetteville April 23, 1954, were upheld by the Arkansas Supreme Court today.

Mrs. Majory Holt Rudolph, against whom the verdicts were entered, appealed on several grounds, including one that the judgments were excessive. The Supreme Court rejected her contentions on all points.

A Washington Circuit Court jury awarded judgments against Mrs. Rudolph for $30,000 in favor of Mrs. Florence D. Cassidy; for $2,500 in favor of Joe Mundy; and for $250 each for La Wanda Mundy and ety Ann Mundy, and for $100 for Rodney Mundy.

In another Washington County case, the Supreme Court affirmed a foreclosure sale of property of Mae E. Norwood, holder of a first mortgage, for $3,500.

C. C. Norwood, holder of a second mortgage, had sought to set aside the sale.

The mortgages had been executed by Bryan Norwood. Bryan and C. C. Norwood are brothers. The relationship of Mae Norwood was not set out in the Supreme Court opinion.

Chief Justice Lee Seamster did not participate in the decisions.

The advertiser's highest standard—of circulation value

Every industry has a standard by which its products can be measured.

The jeweler uses the symbol of a pure diamond. In flatware, the word "sterling," and in dinnerware, the word "bone china," represent high standards of quality and value.

For the advertiser, the symbol of the highest standard of circulation value is the emblem of the Audit Bureau of Circulations*. This hallmark means that newspapers or periodicals so identified are measured according to the most highly regarded rules and standards in the advertising and publishing industry.

The fact that we are privileged to display this A.B.C. emblem here means that you can buy advertising in this newspaper as you would make any other sound business investment—on the basis of well known standards, known values.

"Well, she may be right," replied Frances cautiously. "All the baby books agree with her."

"But not our Tracy Ann," I told her confidently.

But oh, yes, even our Tracy Ann. Indeed, Tracy Ann!

It appears that at 2½ all children really do go through the first great mystic change of life. They cease to be babies and begin to become human beings, and it is a great and emotional struggle.

I feel that I am an authority on the subject as Tracy Ann who is now almost 2 years and 9 months, is just showing signs of emerging from this trying and difficult period.

The child is ridden by new obsessions and groping emotions and fresh fears. It doesn't know quite what it wants, and doesn't quite want what it knows. It is a small lonely being, undergoing a tremendous transition, and the old lollipop doesn't offer its former consolation.

Tracy, who had been all angel, became alternately and angel and an ogre, laughing one moment and crying the next. If crossed in any way, she would turn the smallest issue into another Alamo.

She was absolutely unpredictable. For a week she refused to try on a pretty new dress. But, once she had it on, she broke into a big storm when we wouldn't let her wear it to bed.

One of the chore she lives is to carry in a medicine bottle, open it, and put my breakfast pill in my mouth. Most people in New York City over 40 take them three to six pills or capsules a day. One morning, being in a hurry, I took the pill without her help. Tracy immediately got down on the floor on her hands and knees and wet the rug with a torrent of tears.

Her small misdeeds multiplied. She seemed deliberately to be trying to see how much she could get away with. One I applied a small punishment. Never again. I learned I had to kid her out of a wrong attitude. The more threat of punishment turned her into another Joan of Arc, daring you to put her to the stake.

Once in exasperation, I exclaimed to my wife, "I feel sorry for her husband. He's going to have some stubborn times."

"Why do you always talk of this child as if she were going to get married the very next moment?"

"Well, she already acts more like a grownup woman than anybody I know."

"I'm not sure," said Frances, "that I like that remark."

But in the last few weeks the tantrums have been fewer. Tracy has shown an eagerness to take a new responsibility. She wants to help her mother at every turn. Her favorite song is, "Love and Marriage."

Every morning now she climbs out of her bed, patters into our room, and says, "Hi, ladies and gentlemen. How are you today?"

With considered gravity, now and then she observes, almost wonderingly, "I'm not a little baby any more, I'm a big girl."

Our part-time ogre is getting back on the job of being an angel again. But, I suppose, once, the ogre has crept into a person it never quite leaves.

However, I am consoled by the thought that Tracy Ann will find a small residue of ogrehood is no handicap in the art of becoming a good woman.

DOROTHY DIX

People Often Reluctant to Admit Divorced Status

Dear Miss Dix: Why should a man hold back the fact that he's been divorced? Here's the story. Last year while on vacation I met a wonderful man in his late 30's (I'm 29). We got along very well understood each other and I enjoyed our friendship as I have never enjoyed any other masculine companionship.

We continued seeing each other after we returned to the city. I really expected a proposal any day, then he told me he had been divorced and had a son of 7. To say I was shocked is to put it mildly.

He claims the break-up was his wife's fault but since he kept silent so long I feel I can't trust him at all. The reason for his secrecy he claims, was that he loved me and didn't want to upset me.

ANGEL D. Answer: The man could be acting in good faith. Divorce is an unpleasant fact, even in this sophisticated age. Those who have been through the mill are often ashamed of their marital failures and, since they expect disapproval, it's easy to resort to silence in order not to incur prejudice. At least that's the best premise to go on. Having accepted it, however, there's plenty of questioning to be done by you, and if the man is acting in good faith, he'll not hold back.

You are entitled to know his financial obligations to the first wife and his son, and to learn as many of the causes that led to the divorce as you can — both from him and others. Meet his family and friends, get their reaction to a possible second marriage. Don't be afraid of being nosy — after all, your future is at stake. A woman who marries a divorced man has a rugged path ahead, at best. Know as many of the rocky spots as possible and you have a chance of success.

Eisenhower said "significant testimony to the success of our mutual security programs appears in the new turns and developments of Soviet policy."

Although he said the new Russian maneuvering is still developing, "we must assume that Soviet expansionism has merely taken on a somewhat different guise, and that its fundamental objective is still to disrupt and in the end to dominate the free nations."

Eisenhower added: "With Soviet leaders openly proclaiming their world aim, it would be folly for us and our friends to relax our collective efforts toward stability and security."

Eisenhower said the $4,859,757,000 which he is asking for a low price to pay for the security and vastly greater chances for world peace.

Signs of tough sledding for the program were unmistakable, particularly in the Senate.

With that prospect obviously in mind, Eisenhower told Congress the program is "an indispensable part of our national effort to meet affirmatively the challenge of all forces which threaten the independence of the free world and to overcome the conditions which difficult."

seclusion under a seldom used state law violates the defendant's rights of free speech, freedom of worship and peaceful assembly, and equal protection under the law as guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

A demurrer is a legal device which argues simply that no unlawful offense has been committed.

By raising the question of constitutional rights, the defense lawyers built the framework for a possible appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court if the boycotting Negroes are convicted. But they declined to comment on their plans before the trials opened.

The anti-boycotting law, enacted in 1921 as a weapon against labor strife, prohibits any conspiracy or agreement to hinder the operation of a lawful business "without just cause or legal excuse." The grand jury said the bus boycott is illegal.

Maximum penalty for violating the law is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The indicted Negroes have waived the right of jury trial, electing instead to let the trial judge decide their guilt or innocence.

Although the bus dispute started as a demand for better seating arrangements even if still segregated, it spread ultimately to an outright attack on city and state travel segregation laws.

The mass protest began last Dec. 5 after a Negro seamstress, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined $14 for refusing to obey a driver's order to move to the colored section of his bus.

Final Rites Tuesday for Fred Allen

NEW YORK (AP) — Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Fred Allen, the veteran humorist with the baggy eyes and sharp wit.

The 61-year-old radio and television comedian died of a heart ailment as he strolled a Manhattan street late Saturday night.

A Solemn Requiem Mass will be sung for Allen at the altar of St. Malachy's Roman Catholic Church in the heart of the city. He will be buried at the gate of Heaven Catholic Cemetery in suburban Westchester County.

Allen was an entertainer in radio, television and motion pictures for a quarter of a century. He was a regular panelist on the CBS television show "What's My Line?" Last night he showed up without him. His widow, Portland Hoffa said he would have wanted it that way.

Master of ceremonies John Daly said at the start of the program that despite their sorrow the cast would put on the show "the way Fred would like to have had it done."

This, said Daly, meant doing no more than Allen himself had often done, making his audience laugh "when he didn't feel like laughing."

Steve Allen, no relation, substituted for Fred.

After an autopsy yesterday, Dr. Milton Halpern, chief medical examiner, said the comedian died of occlusive coronary heart disease. He said "Allen had had a heart condition 'over the years'."

His health, however, troubled him on part-time work on the airwaves in 1949. He gave up his struggle against TV about the same time.

wooded area of eastern Oklahoma near Stillwell. He was identified by Sheriff Chester Crittenden of Adair County, Okla., as Vernon Pete English 30, of Stillwell.

The two others, Dan Workman, 30, of Evansville, Ark., and Vernon Fain, 27, of Natural, Okla., were arrested Saturday.

Workman pleaded innocent, and Fain waived preliminary hearing. Both were jailed after failing to post bond.

Members of some breeds, for instance the Doberman Pinscher and the German Shepherd, sometimes are not equipped with full sets of molars. This lack is counted a serious fault if the dog is shown. Dog's teeth are subject to all of the ills that beset their owners'. They may decay, ulcer, crack or break. Toothache pains a dog as much as it does humankind. Perhaps more, because the dog cannot explain to the dentist what is wrong. But when he needs dental care he should have it.

While it is true that wild dogs usually die at a fairly early age when their teeth become bad, dogs today on the average suffer less tooth trouble than do their owners. Basic reason for this is that their diet is actually better and credit for this should certainly go to those researchers in dog nutrition who have taught us to feed our pets better than ourselves.

The Swift Nutritional Research Kennels in Chicago and the research departments of such fine schools as the University of Wisconsin, Cornell and others, have been responsible for much of the knowledge that has led to balanced diet feeding. This better feeding has improved not only the teeth but also the general health of dogs.

Fetchick Wins Florida Meet

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Mike Fetchick, Leone Hebert, Billy Maxwell, Ernie Vossler, and others of the "lesser knowns" of golf are bearing down on the "Old Guard" these days.

Fetchick, a 33-year-old from Mahopack, N.Y., who is making this third circuit swing, won the St. Petersburg Open yesterday in a sudden death playoff with Hebert, 28-year-old from Erie, Pa., after both carded 275s for the regulation 72 holes.

Maxwell, from Odessa, Tex., finished third at 276 after leading for two rounds. Vossler, a 25-year-old master plumber from Fort Worth, Tex., tied for fourth with Ted Kroll at 277.

Although Kroll, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., is no newcomer to the circuit, this is the first year he has made a big splash, capturing two tournaments and leading the money winners.

A tie for sixth at 278 by Cary Middlecoff of Dallas, pretourney favorite and defending champion, and Ed Furgol, the 1954 National Open champion, was the best showing by the "Old Guard."

Fetchick and Furgol had 69s in the final round, Hebert and Kroll 70s, Vossler and Middlecoff 71s and Maxwell a 72. The 6,489-year Lakewood Country Club course has a par of 36-36-72.

McNeese Wins Title Over Texas Five

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Poise in the clinches and a tight defense were the ingredients that made McNeese State College of Lake Charles, La., champion of the 1956 National Intercollegiate (NAIA) Basketball Tournament.

The Cowboys trailed at the half 34-35 and came from behind three times before going ahead to stay in their breath-taking 60-55 conquest of Texas Southern Saturday night.

Texas Southern, a fast-breaking outfit from Houston, was the first Negro club ever to reach the finals in the 18 years of the tournament.

Bill Reigel, then nation's leading scorer with an average of 33.9 in 36 games, set a new tournament record of 158 points for five games.

Pittsburg (Kan.) State defeated Wheaton College of Illinois 77-72 for third place in the windup of the 33-team tournament.

Integration Brings Misery to Democrats

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Democratic party has the miseries of a man who has been told that he will blow the party to bits in a fight over civil rights and segregation.

Their immediate problem is to keep the Democrats in Congress from exploding before the convention. The fuse has been lit by 101 Southern Democrats in Congress: 49 senators, 52 representatives.

They said—in an extraordinary "manifesto" declaring legal war on the Supreme Court's ruling against public school segregation—that: "We pledge ourselves to use all lawful means to bring about a reversal of this decision."

Some who signed did so reluctantly for political reasons at home. And not all Southern congressmen signed. But it can be taken for granted plenty who signed were not bluffing.

That the Southerners may back the manifesto with some effort in Congress to block the court's ruling hangs like a threat over the whole party, which needs solid ranks if it hopes to win this year. Already there is talk of a third party.

If the Southerners in Congress try to make good on their manifesto, they will be deliberately walking into a fight, perhaps a party-splitting fight, particularly from Northern and Western Democrats who call themselves liberals.

But if the congressional Democrats reach convention without a blowup, the party then runs into a problem which is daily becoming more acute as some Southern states struggle to preserve segregation.

This is it: Civil rights and segregation have become such issues that the party can hardly avoid taking a stand on them in its platform and in the open convention. But how can the convention please both sides: Southerners and the "liberal" wing.

The uncertainty created by the Southerners spreads in other directions too.

Adlai Stevenson, anxious for Southern support in seeking the presidential nomination, has been to moderate on the segregation issue that he sometimes sounds vague.

As a result of this manifesto he may before convention time, be pushed or needed into much blunter statements that will lose him Southern or some Northern support. Perhaps he can avoid this fate. He's pretty good with language.

Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, the Democrats' Senate leader, has been mentioned as a likely presidential candidate for a third party. He's a shrewd politician. If he has presidential ambitions, they probably do not lie with a third party. It couldn't win. It could only wreck the Democrats. Johnson says he doesn't expect any third party.

He may have hopes for the Democratic nomination if the convention deadlocks on other candidates. That would be just added reason for him to work his hardest to avoid explosions in Congress before the convention.

Keeping party peace in the Senate is his responsibility anyway. Doing it this year should be a supreme test of his Senate leadership. He did not sign the manifesto. Because of his job as Democratic leader, it is understood, he was not asked to sign. He'd ruin his presidential chances with the party if he did sign.

Open Letter to Princess Grace Kelly

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—An open letter to Grace Kelly.

Dear Grace

This is the week when you are scheduled to leave Hollywood, perhaps never to return. Your fiancé, Prince Rainier, has said that he doesn't think you should make any more pictures.

It's a shame. Hollywood dearly needs new stars. It is ironic that the movies have apparently lost the two brightest new stars to come along in recent times—yourself and James Dean.

But what I wanted to write about was not the loss of box office brilliance which your retirement would bring about. It seems to me that if you leave the movie scene—as apparently you will do—as a dutiful wife—something important will have gone away.

There have been times when you have been exasperated with Hollywood. And I know you are aware of those who have been exasperated with you. A director once snapped that you had "stained my floor."

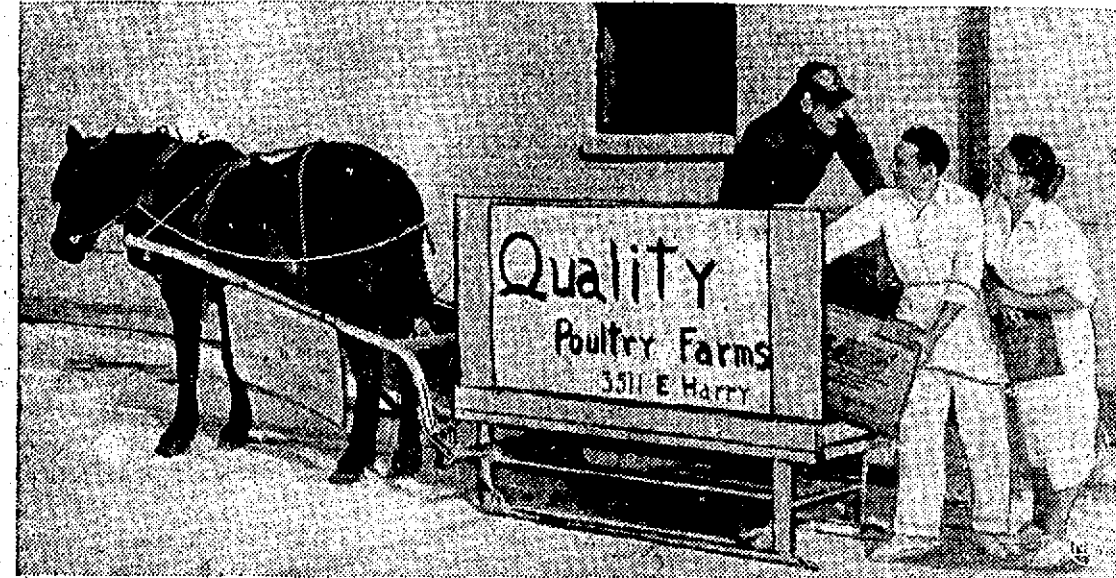

You have been the despair of in-laws, sometimes including myself. Writers have poked fun at your long white gloves, your dignified bearing, your regal air.

But all part of the jostling around that all celebrities get. But I think your critics will share my sorrow at your departure.

You brought to Hollywood a quality that has seldom been seen before. The town has its ladies, but the town's dignity has come with you. It is not only that you are a lady, it is that you are a lady who presents herself so unobtrusively as a real

CUTTING CLASS CUT—This do-it-yourself haircutting class for mothers didn't last long. Chicago, Ill., barbers protested the YWCA plan to teach mothers the tonsorial art, using their children as guinea pigs. Barber Fred Glaser, center, volunteered to conduct the class, but an official of the Master Barbers Association called the project "illegal." "We're not against children," the official explained. "We just want to save them from barbarian haircuts by their mothers."

HE GOT HIMSELF A HORSE—icy streets brought "Old Dobbin and his sleigh" back to Wichita, Kan. The out-of-date but reliable method of transportation was used by Paul Stinnett, left, to make his deliveries of eggs and poultry to restaurants. Stinnett is shown above unloading an order at one restaurant as he talks to chef Joe Billers and waitress Mrs. Louise Welch.

CHAPTER XIX

Lisa Kyriakides thought the whole mission odd indeed and to shrouded in mystery and unsaid things. It was the first time that Dr. Thackeray had withheld any details from her. But Lisa knew, in the very short time that the Underground had formed, that unquestioning discipline was a requisite. She did not question him; at the time, she didn't like it.

To travel to far-off Larissa to bring down a lone British escapee was too much to swallow. Perhaps he is an officer of high rank or some functionary in the new Underground—perhaps he was no escapee at all, Lisa thought.

"You will leave for Dadi tonight. Once there, a girl named Eleftheria Yalouris will meet you. She will travel with you to a village named Kaloghrani. She will introduce you to a man you will know only as Yassili. You identify yourself as Helena. You are not to question him."

Lisa nodded and studied his stone face.

Usually it's quite the reverse. The quickest way to fame in this town is for a gal to display her more physical aspects. Many a famous name has taken that route, and I'm not knocking sex. No, indeed. My point is that it's refreshing and downright admirable for a girl to achieve fame strictly on the basis of her highest qualities.

You seem to have felt that it was possibly to be dignified though a movie star. Against all odds, you made it work. There should be a special award for those who can successfully espouse dignity in these trying times.

So goodbye, Grace, may you find happiness with your prince. Sincerely,
Bob Thomas

"Our people in Dadi will arrange his travel pass, papers and change his appearance. They will pass pay-off money on the train he rides. You are to spare nothing in your power to insure his safety. Is that clear?"

"Yes," Lisa whispered. "Once you arrive in Athens take him to Laarus' and contact me immediately."

Lisa repeated the instructions and checked her papers and money.

Papa-Panos, the little priest, entered the room. "Come, children," he said. "It is time to eat."

"I'd better eat and get along. I wouldn't want my two German friends to stand outside in the rain too long."

They walked from the room toward the kitchen. Before they entered, Dr. Thackeray turned suddenly and faced the woman. "Lisa, you seem upset today. Is anything wrong?"

"Wrong? No—no—of course not."

"One more thing, Lisa. In the event that something goes sour, if capture seems imminent—you are to kill him. He is not to be taken alive by the Germans."

As they entered the kitchen Lisa's mind was spinning a plan furiously. A plan that could save her children—but would make her a traitor to her own people.

Konrad Heilser groaned, sprawling into a sitting position on the couch. His head throbbed.

Zervos, the fat swine, had thrown a four-day orgy to celebrate the acquisition of his new apartment house.

fabulous parties. He'd lay the law down to Zervos, show the Greek pig who was who. Zervos had promised 10 million a month to Heilser so that he could run his little extortion game. Heilser would demand double that.

Konrad Heilser shuffled through the papers on his desk. Escapes were everywhere. The filthy British roamed the length and breadth of the land. Now there were reports of an Underground movement becoming more active daily.

But this was not the main problem. The main problem was the Greeks working inside the German Command who were pilfering information.

Who knew where the American was now? Each day he remained free the threat increased. If the names fell into British hands there would be no stopping an Underground that knew what the German movements would be.

Once the American was bagged—once the Stergiou list was known he could set the resistance back two years.

A knock on the door. Zervos entered. Heilser glared at him in disgust.

His tailor-made suit and vest were of some weird color, and he was fatter than ever. Diamond stick pin, diamond cufflinks, four diamond rings. Zervos walked up to Heilser's desk without a trace of the old fear.

"We have an appointment to meet Lisa Kyriakides in an hour, Konrad," Zervos gloated in the newly found equality which allowed him to call Heilser by his Christian name. "I think it is about time we dispose of her."

"I still run this department, Mr. Zervos. So long as there is a chance that one of these people will lead us to Morrison, we cannot dispose of them."

"But in Lisa's case," Zervos continued, "she will not give information. You know that. It is foolish to allow her to run around free. The least we could do is put a watch on her."

"You idiot! Put a watch on her and the Underground would know it in five minutes. No. Zervos, she will obey us as long as we hold her children."

Lisa Kyriakides walked across Constitution Square toward the row of shops facing it on Hermes Street. Men—Greek, German and Italian—all turned and watched her pass.

She looked straight ahead, neither ignoring nor acknowledging the stares that followed her. For Lisa had been endowed with a striking beauty that could impress itself on a memory even if seen only as a face in a passing crowd.

The lines of her face were carved to perfection and set in a halo of golden hair—rare for a Greek. Her complexion was a shade lighter or olive than most Greeks. She moved along Hermes Street with the grace and carriage of a noblewoman.

Lisa was thin, a bit too thin. But this seemed to add to her haunting loveliness.

The bout will be broadcast and telecast (NBC-TV, radio, 9 p.m. CST) nationally.
